Part 1. Turn the passage into the past tense. Make any alterations that may be required.
I'm going to Calabria on Thursday. I'll meet my friend John at the airport and our plane will leave at noon. We are going there because there's a seminar on Language Teaching on Friday. John will stay there for the Friday afternoon session but I'll catch a plane back to Milan early in the afternoon. So on Thursday and on Friday I won't have time for a proper lunch, but that won't matter because it's an important meeting – it's going to take place in the main Palace of Regione and a large number of teachers will be attending it.
The Reggio meeting will start a series of activities run by local teacher trainers.

[from Three Men in a Boat]
We got out at Sonning, and (go) for a walk round the village. It is the most fairy-like little nook on the whole river. It (be) more like a stage village than one (build) of bricks and mortar. Every house (smother) in roses, and now, in early June, they (burst) forth in clouds of dainty splendour. If you (stop) at Sonning, (put up) at the "Bull," behind the church. It (be) a veritable picture of an old country inn, with green, square courtyard in front, where, on seats beneath the trees, the old men (group) of an evening to drink their ale and (gossip) over village politics; with low, quaint rooms and latticed windows, and awkward stairs and winding passages.
We (roam) about sweet Sonning for an hour or so, and then, it (be) too late (push on) past Reading, we (decide – go back) to one of the Shiplake islands, and (put up) there for the night. It (be) still early when we (get) settled, and George (say) that, as we (have) plenty of time, it (be) a splendid opportunity (try) a good supper.
